This quick-reference pack introduces the basic architecture of the Acts Overlap framework. It is openly framework-specific. It is not a neutral hermeneutics guide, a complete defense of the model, an exhaustive study of Acts, or a substitute for the Acts Overlap Theology Series, focused Digital Studies, or the full analytical tools of the Diagnostic Manual.

Its bounded purpose is to help readers keep the framework's chronology and controlling distinctions visible while reading Acts. Scripture must supply the evidence for every conclusion.

How to Use This Pack

Keep this pack beside an open Bible. Begin with the passage itself, read its surrounding context, and use the reference pages to test—not replace—your observations. The framework supplies interpretive controls; the immediate passage determines the classification.

Three Governing Commitments

Commitment	Meaning
Meaning first	Establish what the passage communicates in its own context.
Assignment second	Identify the audience, program, authority, promise, commission, or obligation to which the content belongs.
Application third	Apply the truth without transferring program-specific requirements or identities.

Questions to Keep Visible

- Who is speaking or acting, and who is being addressed?
- What message or content is actually being communicated?
- What does the surrounding narrative establish about the setting and purpose?
- Which program possesses the promise, commission, sign, ordinance, or obligation?
- Does the proposed application preserve the passage's meaning and direct assignment?

Do not classify content merely because Paul is the speaker or participant. Speaker identity is evidence, but it does not by itself establish programmatic identity.

The Controlling Chronology

Period	Prophecy Program	Mystery Program
Before Acts 9	Already operating in relation to Israel	Previously hidden; not yet operating
Acts 9	Continues to operate	Begins with Paul's calling and commission
Acts 9–28	Operates concurrently with Mystery	Operates concurrently with Prophecy
Acts 28	Reaches its national judicial suspension point	Continues
Beyond Acts 28	Suspended, not abolished; future promises remain	Continues according to its revealed purpose

The Central Claim

Acts 9–28 records the concurrent operation of Israel's Prophecy Program and the Body of Christ's Mystery Program. The programs remain distinct in identity, audience, calling, promises, commissions, and destiny. Their presence in the same historical period is not a transition, blending, merging, replacement, or morphing of one program into the other.

Chronological Guardrails

- Prophecy begins before Acts 9.
- Mystery begins at Acts 9 with Paul.
- Prophecy and Mystery operate distinctly and concurrently during Acts 9–28.
- Prophecy is suspended at Acts 28.
- Mystery continues beyond Acts 28.
- Suspension does not abolish Israel's future prophetic promises.

Two Distinct Divine Programs

Feature	Israel's Prophecy Program	Body of Christ's Mystery Program
Revelatory character	Revealed in seed form in the Law and progressively expanded through the prophets	Previously hidden, unspoken, and unrevealed; revealed through Paul
People	Israel	The Body of Christ
Calling	Earthly	Heavenly
Identity	Covenant identity; Bride identity	Non-covenantal identity; not the Bride
Inheritance and destiny	Kingdom inheritance; New Earth and New Jerusalem	Heavenly places; occupies the seats of angels
Acts chronology	Already operative before Acts 9; suspended at Acts 28	Begins at Acts 9; continues beyond Acts 28

Shared dependence on the finished work of Christ does not erase programmatic distinctions. Common ground must not be used to transfer one program's identity, covenants, ordinances, promises, commissions, signs, or destiny to the other.

Peter and Paul: Distinct Apostolic Lines

Question	Peter	Paul
Programmatic line	Prophecy and the Kingdom	Mystery and the Body of Christ
Primary apostolic association	Israel and the Twelve's Kingdom commission	Distinctive apostleship and stewardship revealed by the risen Christ
Acts-overlap ministry	Continues within Israel's still-operative prophetic setting	Ministers while both programs are operative, yet remains exclusively the Mystery apostle
Interpretive caution	Do not transfer Israel's commission to the Body	Do not label every message or practice "Mystery" merely because Paul speaks or participates

Paul During Acts 9-28

Paul may address Israel in its prophetic setting, reason from Israel's Scriptures, proclaim Jesus as Israel's promised Messiah, and accommodate himself to Jewish circumstances without becoming a Prophecy apostle or placing the Body of Christ under Israel's program. His apostleship, commission, and stewardship remain distinctly Mystery.

Content proclaimed is not identical to commission possessed. Paul speaking does not automatically make the content distinctive Mystery revelation.

Reading Events During the Overlap

When a passage occurs during Acts 9–28, concurrency establishes the historical setting but does not settle the classification. Interpret the event by the evidence supplied in its immediate and broader context.

Control	Ask
Audience	Who is directly addressed, and which people or group are merely present?
Message	What content is actually proclaimed, commanded, promised, or explained?
Revelatory setting	Is the content already known through Prophecy, newly revealed through Paul, or connected to another stated source?
Purpose	Why does the passage say the event, sign, practice, or statement occurs?
Programmatic identity	Which divinely assigned audience, calling, promise, commission, or obligation governs the content?

Interpretive Restraint

- Human instrument does not automatically determine programmatic identity.
- Historical participation does not automatically create doctrinal obligation.
- A sign in Paul’s ministry must be classified by audience, purpose, revelatory setting, and context.
- The immediate passage may require a conclusion more limited than a system-level summary.

Local Rejection and National Suspension

Acts records several local Jewish rejections followed by a local turn toward Gentile hearers. These events affect the direction of ministry in a particular place, but they do not constitute successive stages by which Israel's Prophecy Program gradually disappears.

Passage	What occurs	What must not be concluded
Acts 13:44–48	Jewish opposition in Pisidian Antioch becomes the occasion for ministry to Gentiles	That Israel's Prophecy Program is nationally suspended here
Acts 18:5–7	Opposition in Corinth produces a local ministry turn	That Prophecy has become Mystery or ceased nationally
Acts 19:8–10	Resistance in Ephesus leads Paul to separate the disciples	That this is another stage of a gradual programmatic transition
Acts 28:23–29	Paul invokes Israel's prophetic indictment at Rome	This is merely another local turn; within the framework it is the national suspension point

Local Jewish rejection is not national Israel rejection. Local ministry consequence is not national programmatic change. Prophecy and Mystery remain concurrent through Acts 9–28.

The Acts Overlap Non-Transfer Principle

Concurrency means simultaneous operation, not shared ownership. The presence of both programs in the same historical period does not transfer doctrines, ordinances, commissions, covenant obligations, signs, practices, promises, or destinies from one program into the other.

Do not infer	Controlling distinction
Paul participates in an event; therefore the event is Mystery doctrine	Participation does not redefine programmatic identity.
A practice occurs during Acts 9–28; therefore it governs the Body	Historical proximity does not create doctrinal transfer.
Both programs rest on Christ’s finished work; therefore their identities and promises merge	Common redemptive ground does not erase divine assignment.
A local synagogue rejects Paul; therefore Israel is nationally suspended	Local response must be distinguished from the Acts 28 national boundary.

Compact Controls

- CONCURRENCY ≠TRANSFER
- HISTORICAL PROXIMITY ≠PROGRAMMATIC OWNERSHIP
- PAULINE SPEAKER ≠AUTOMATICALLY PAULINE/MYSTERY CONTENT
- HISTORICAL PARTICIPATION ≠DOCTRINAL OBLIGATION
- PROGRAMMATIC AUTHORITY FOLLOWS DIVINE ASSIGNMENT, NOT SPEAKER IDENTITY

Key Terms and Scripture Tracing

Term	Quick definition
Prophecy Program	God's revealed, covenantal, earthly program for Israel, already operating before Acts 9.
Mystery Program	God's previously hidden heavenly purpose for the Body of Christ, revealed through Paul and beginning at Acts 9.
Acts Overlap	The concurrent operation of Prophecy and Mystery during Acts 9–28 without programmatic merger or transfer.
Prophetic accommodation	Paul's voluntary accommodation to Jewish audiences and Israel's still-operative setting without administering Israel's program or placing the Body under it.
National suspension	The Acts 28 judicial boundary at which Israel's Prophecy Program is suspended, not abolished.
Non-transfer principle	The rule that concurrency, proximity, or participation does not move program-specific content from one divine assignment to another.

Suggested Scripture Tracing

- Prophecy's prior revelation: Luke 1:68–75; Acts 3:18–26
- Paul's calling and commission: Acts 9:1–22; Acts 26:12–18
- Mystery revealed through Paul: Romans 16:25–26; Ephesians 3:1–9; Colossians 1:24–27
- Distinct apostolic spheres: Galatians 2:7–9
- Local turns in ministry: Acts 13:44–48; 18:5–7; 19:8–10
- National suspension boundary: Acts 28:23–29
- Israel's future remains: Romans 11:1–2, 25–29

One-Page Reference Summary

Chronology	Status
Before Acts 9	Prophecy operating
Acts 9	Mystery begins; Prophecy continues
Acts 9–28	Prophecy and Mystery distinct and concurrent
Acts 28	Prophecy nationally suspended; Mystery continues
Beyond Acts 28	Mystery continues; Israel’s prophetic promises await future fulfillment

Keep the Programs Distinct

Prophecy	Mystery
Israel	Body of Christ
Earthly calling	Heavenly calling
Covenantal identity	Non-covenantal identity
Already revealed and operative	Previously hidden; revealed through Paul
Suspended at Acts 28	Continues beyond Acts 28
